Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kubo et al (JP 10-265918).

Kubo teaches a quasicrystalline structural material having a composition of Al₈₀Fe_{6.5}Cr_{13.5} (abs and par[0014]) which would meet the compositional claim limitations wherein "b" as defined by Applicant is 6.5, "c" is 13.5, "z" is 0 and x, y, and j all appear to be roughly 0 and thus fall within the ranges claimed.

Regarding the limitation that the article formed from the claimed alloy composition is a coating, Kubo is silent to the material being a coating. However, it would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have formed the claimed composition as a coating to provide a substrate with increased impact toughness.

Regarding the limitation that the coating is formed on a utensil or vessel for cooking food product, Kubo is silent to the claim limitation. However, this is merely an intended use. Statements of intended use are not considered patentably distinguishing limitations. See Ex parte Masham 2 U.S.P.Q.2d 1647, 1648. In re Thauau 135 F.2d 344, 47 U.S.P.Q. 324. Application of Hack, 245 F.2d.246, 114 U.S.P.Q. 161. It would have been obvious to have used the claimed coating of Kubo on any structural component including as a cooking utensil with a reasonable expectation of success of providing the component with an increase impact toughness.

Regarding claims 3-4 with the limitation "wherein the surface of said utensil is in contact with the food product has the claimed coating", these limitations are drawn to an intended use. The coated article of Kubo would be just as suitable to contact food production as that claimed since they both comprise that same alloy coating. Absent a teaching of the criticality or showing of unexpected results, the claim limitation that the coating is in contact with food products is not a patentable distinction over the prior art since one could readily place food in contact with the coated structural component of Kubo.
